Without any doubt it was Manuel Göttsching with his band Ash Ra Tempel that were responsible for the label 'Berliner Schule' which later became electronic avant-garde.. With his follow-up band Ashra, he defined a new symbiosis of guitars and electronics.

In 1984 it was the magnificent "E2-E4" – named after the most popular opening move in a game of chess – with whom he delivered an epoch-making masterpiece of music.

“E2 – E4” is a dramatic composition and interpretation.

The album even has been compared to resemble an 80's version of Ravel's 'Bolero: Simplistic and delicate, turning around itself by extending itself into a one hour long masterpiece

Long before Techno and Trance simply became an empty phrase, Götttsching has celebrated the pure essence of this music in many different variations years ahead of their time.

A re-release to coincide the 30st anniversary will present the original “E2-E4” as a CD-version along with original LP artwork.
