hit "Call Mother A Lonely Field"

Jackie Leven's comment to the concert:

"This was my first visit to Bonn, and I was with my two favourite musicians, friends and companions – Michael Cosgrave and Kevin Foster. Over the years I've come to love Bonn – I like all the crazy people drinking in the square as I walk from my hotel to The Rhine. I always go down to The Rhine to have a long peaceful think about things. It's a healing river and the long slow bend has mystery.

Once, walking from my hotel, I saw a dead cat by the side of the path – when I came back, one of the crazy alcoholic women was holding it and crying. I never take photographs – there are enough photos in the world already, but this woman and the cat would have been a great portrait of sadness.

I love "Harmonie" – it's real professional, the sound is good, everybody is very friendly, the food is good, and the backstage room is a room you feel good to be in.

You cannot say these things about everywhere we play! This was a good concert – we were playing well, I was singing well, and although I have no personal memory of the performance (!) I can see that I was happy to be there and that the audience was happy too.

We all must live for the good times – the bad times are never far away...'
